

For Not, But In An Owl Eyes

They say owls are wise, but why? Is it because they live along time, or is it because they have seen a lot in their lives? Owls are one of the oldest birds in the sky. Why does this specific bird live so long? Owls have one special trait, they're just like humans. Humankind has forgotten what nature is, from using technology, to staying indoors. When we think of our world most people think of how far we have come in life, or how we've evolved. But have you ever wondered what an animal thinks, or why they act a specific way? Owls are hardly seen anymore, for do they know that humanity is killing itself. Owls have seen how humans act, think, and do, they've learned to stay away. It's like a toxic relationship between humans and animals. Owls are smart; they stay away for one reason: they've learned that humanity is not good. Humankind is killing itself, by the pollution in the air, to the technology. Is it bad to know too much? For in an owl's eyes lies the truth behind humankind.
